History of Noble County, Indiana.

Noble County, Indiana, is situated in the northeastern portion of the state, the latitude of the court house at Albion being about 41° 30' north, and the longitude about 8° west from Washington.

The superficial area is 1145 congressional townships, or 420 square miles. Including the County Seat, Albion, containing 4 square miles, there are 13 civil townships. The surface formation belongs to the "drift" period, and shows great variety—level, undulating, hilly, and marshy. Originally the county, excepting its lakes and a small amount of prairie, was covered with a very heavy growth of timber, consisting principally of oak, beech, maple, ash, tulip (white-wood or poplar), black and white walnut, hickory, elm, hackberry, buckeye, sycamore, locust, iron or basswood, cherry, mulberry, American aspen, cottonwood, cucumber, sassafras, cedar, tamarack or American larch, and many minor varieties.

In its primitive condition, Indiana was probably the best timbered (deciduous timber) state in the Union.

There are something like 150 lakes, great and small, in the county, with a total area of about 7000 acres.

The marshes are extensive, and cover perhaps 20 per cent. of the surface of the county. Many of them are in process of drainage, and will eventually become the best land in the county.

Quarry stone is not found in the county, with perhaps one exception in York Township; but bootlers of all kinds are abundant, and there are large deposits of peat, brick clay, sand, and gravel.

The largest body of water is the "Reservoir" at Rome City, with an area, by close computation, of 500 acres. It is one of the finest lakes in the state, and its surroundings warrant the expectations of the people that, at no distant day it will become a famous watering-place.

Numerous springs, mineral and otherwise, abound, and the scenery is delightful. (See view of "City and lake in the Atlas.")

Among the other large lakes, are Tippecanoe, the head of Tippecanoe River, Bear, High, Muscat, Tamarack, Chain, the Mill Pond at Port Mitchell, Round, Long, and Bisler.

The land, generally, is well adapted to the production of wheat (winter), oats, grass, fruit, and stock of various kinds. The water-powers not extensive, though considerable—the best being, perhaps, at Rome City. The county is exceedingly well watered, and its railway facilities scarcely surpassed.

The first settlement in Noble County was made by Joel Bristol, April 4, 1827, on what is still known as the "Bristol farm," three and one-half miles southeast of the village of Wolf Lake, in Noble Township. Accompanying him were the Tibbitt family, consisting of the three brothers, Samuel, Isaac, and William, and three sisters. Of these, Isaac, then a lad of seventeen years, and one sister residing at Brimfield, are all that remain in the county (June, 1874). Isaac Tibbitt has a fine property at Wawaka, where he settled in 1834.

Mr. Tibbitt had seen much of frontier life even previous to his settlement in Indiana, having been born in Marion County, Ohio, in 1810, removing thence to the vicinity of Fort Defiance, subsequently to Fort Wayne, and finally to Noble County, where he has since resided and raised a family, and where he is familiarly known as the "oldest settler." After a half century of experience in a frontier country, he declares "he was to try life over again, he would never bring a young wife into the wilderness."

Their nearest neighbors, excepting the savages, were on the Blue River, six miles distant, toward Fort Wayne. The nearest post-office was at Fort Wayne until 1835, when an office was established on Perry's Prairie at Henry Miller's, and called "Good Hope" post-office. Henry Miller was the first post-master.

Mr. Tibbitt thinks the first settler in the county, after himself, was Levi Perry, who settled on section 33 in Perry Township, in 1830.

He went on foot twelve miles to help raise Perry's log-cabin, traveling through snow a foot in depth, and taking his dinner in his pocket, which he found frozen hard when he came to eat it. He claims to have helped raise more cabins than any other man in Noble County.

Soon after Perry, came Henry Miller, John Davis, Isaiah Dungan, James Dungan, Samuel Dungan, Charles Murry, Adam and Henry Eagle, Golden Schlotterbach, Jacob Haisne, Henry Hostetter and others, all settling in Perry Township.

The first land entered within the limits of Noble County, was in 1821. The entry was made June 12—by Isaac Dungan, the northeast quarter-section 33, and by Levi Perry, the east half of the southeast quarter-section 33, both in Perry Township. Among others who entered lands during 1831, were Jacob Shobe, Susanna Hagan, Adam Eagle, Henry Eagle, Jacob Wolf, John Hess, Wm. Eagle, Daniel Hark, Joseph Smalley, Henry Hostetter, L. Dungan, and Henry Miller. All these settlements were in Perry Township. Abraham Pankake settled, in September, 1834, on land now partly included within the limits of Ligonier. More of these early settlers will be found in the sketch of Perry Township.

Among the prominent men of the past, who have figured largely in the history of Noble County, may be mentioned the Hon. Henry R. Barnham, who settled in Wayne Township in 1836, and who held the office of probate judge, with the exception of one year, until the probate courts were abolished; Horatio M. Sick, who settled at Albion, in 1843; John W. Dawson, of the former place, who set at Fort Wayne; Hon. James L. Worden; ex-Governor Bigger; Hon. Stephen Willard; Hon. S. J. Soughdon; Hon. William Mitchell, M.C., and Jerome B. Chaffee, since United States Senator from some state west.

When first settled, Noble County constituted a portion of Allen County, which was organized in 1824, and included all the northeastern portion of the state.

In 1832, La Grange County was organized and included Noble County within its limits, with the county seat at Lima.

The original town plat of Wolf Lake was recorded at Fort Wayne, and that of Ligonier, at Lima.

Noble County was organized in 1836. In 1840, the total population was 2,792. The first election for county officers was held in the Spring of 1836, at a log-cabin on Perry's Prairie. At this election, Isaac Spawer was elected clerk and recorder; James Hostetter, sheriff, and also, as different accounts have it, ex-officio treasurer, assessor, and collector; Henry Eagle, coroner; and Joel Bisler, Henry Hostetter, and Abraham Pankake, county commissioners. Latta and Elijah Blackman were elected associate judges. Hon. Henry R. Barnham, as stated elsewhere, was the first probate judge.

The first marriage solemnized in the county, according to Mr. Tibbitt's recollection, was that of Samuel Tibbitt and Eunice Knight. Eight months later L. W. Murphy and Jacob Tibbitt were married, both couples by Thomas Brown, of Allen County.

Mr. Tibbitt recollects well many of the early settlers, as most of them came into the county by the old Fort Wayne and Golden road, which led past the Bristol farm, making it a stopping place, it being the only one for a distance of twenty miles. That road, according to the old settlers, was first cut through under the direction of Gen. Anthony Wayne, who built the fort at the Miami Village, where now stands the flourishing city named in his honor in the fall of 1794, after his celebrated defeat of the Indians at the Miami Rapids, August 20, 1794.

The names of many of the early settlers, with incidents of their experience, will be found in connection with the township histories.

Perry Township was organized in the Spring of 1833, while the territory comprising Noble County was yet a part of La Grange County. It comprised according to Mr. Prentiss accounts, the present townships numbered 33, 34, 35 and 36 north, and in ranges 8, 9 and 10 east, taking in nine townships in Noble and three townships in La Grange County.

The first election was held at the house of John Hostetter, in the "Haw Patch," for justices of the peace, at which 25 votes were polled. The candidates were Jacob Wolf, William McConnell and L. W. Murphy. Jacob Wolf was the first justice.

The first child born in the county was Simon Hostetter, August 8, 1832. Dr. Dudley C. Waller appears to have been the first permanent physician in the county. He settled at Rochester, then a point of considerable importance, since absorbed by Ligonier.

The first building erected in the county, was undoubtedly the one built for the Indian Child, "Flat Belly," who held a "reservation" six miles square, partly in Noble and partly in Kosciusko County. The house was built as early as 1820, of brick manufactured on the reservation. It stood on section 30, in the town of Sparta. It was the grand "council house" for several years, and, according to Indian accounts, was blown down in a terrific storm, and in March, 1848, the county seat was again removed to Port Mitchell, and a court house and other buildings erected. Finally, the permanent location was fixed by vote of the people in August, 1846, at Albion.

As is usual in all the newer portions of the western states, a number of towns with high-sounding names and all the appliances of civilization were started, but none since been completely obliterated, or had their business absorbed by places more favorably located.

Among the ambitious cities in Noble County, were Wolf Lake, Port Mitchell, Rochester, once the largest town in the county, with iron-works, mills, stores, etc.; Springfield, Lisbon, Nobleville, Northport, Sparta, and Augusta. The advent of railways changed the whole business of the county, and built up the flourishing cities Kendallville and Ligonier, and the villages of Wawaka, Brimfield, Rome City, and Avilla.

The first two mentioned have a very extensive trade in all kinds of manufactured goods, grain, lumber, fruit, etc., etc., and are as lively and bustling towns as to be found of the same size in the state.

Albion, the county seat, in consequence of the building of the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway through its limits, is growing very fast, and putting on metropolitan airs, and bids fair to be one of the best towns in the county. Avilla and Grand Rapids Crossing are also waking up and enlarging their borders, while the little town of Cornwall proposes to honor the cause it bears, by entering the lists as a competitor for the trade of the southwestern portion of the county.

A part of the village of Wolcottville is located in Noble County, and the promise of the Canada Southern Railway has put new life into it. A newspaper has been established, and the people fully believe the "good time coming" is close at hand.

A great public improvement was at one time projected, which, if it had been completed, would no doubt have advanced the interests of the county very materially.

A dam was constructed by the state about the years 1837-8, and a canal commenced, intending to run from Rome City to some point on the Wabash and Eagle Canal near or to Fort Wayne; but the great financial revolution of that day, or some other substantial reason, stopped the work, and there only remain the "Reservoir" at Rome City and a partially ruined canal-bed, extending a couple of miles. The "Reservoir" is now used only for the water power it affords, which is quite extensive, and as a place for pleasure resort. It covers an area of some 500 acres, and is a beautiful sheet of water.

For a more extended notice, see history of Orange Township and Rome City. Among the earliest settlers of the eastern portion of the county, were the How, William Mitchell, and two sons, Hon. Henry R. Barnham, Edwin Randall, N. I. Hill, Samuel Weiner, Samuel Burkwell, Joseph Scott, E. and S. Pierce, Allan Manger, Lewis and James Dunbar, William Latta, D. B. Herriman, O. Watkins, Jr. Howe, James McQueen, James Thomson, John and Stephen T. Sawyer. These settled in 1836.

The year previous, 1835, there arrived Oliver Perry, David Wadsworth, G. Ulmer, Widow Dingman, who built the first frame house in Kendallville; J. B. Rice, Luke Duggins, David S. Field, and L. Morris.

David B. Herriman was the first representative in the State Legislature. Anson Greecman was the first county auditor. He was from Orange Township. Allan Manger was the first county commissioner.

The first post-office established in the eastern part of the county was at Marshall's, in 1836. Joseph Scott, the first post-master.

Judge Barnham married the first couple in this part of the county—Marcellus Pickard and Miss Rickard. Among the very earliest marriages, was that of Truman Horse and the Widow Dingman, who traveled over to the "Haw Patch" to get the ceremony performed, and lost their way and camped all night in the woods on their return.

Mason M. Boven, of Kendallville, settled with his father, when a boy of six years, in 1830, at Fort Wayne. He carried the mail between Fort Wayne and White Pigeon, Mich., as early as 1837. The route passed through what is now Kendallville, following substantially the plank road route. He thinks a post-office was first established at Kendallville, in 1836, with Hon. Wm. Mitchell as the first post-master. At that date there was a small settlement in Swan Township.

The earliest settlers in Allen Township, were Henry Idings and sons, Ryland Reed, and Eliza A. Weaver.

Kendallville then consisted of one frame house (the Widow Dingman's), and three or four log ones.

The first preachers in the county, according to Jacob Wolf's recollection, were the Revs. Phelps and Robinson, who came to the county in 1833. The first leveled log-house was built by Jacob Shobe in 1833.

Among those who served on the grand jury, were Seymour Moses, William Wilmetts, George Benner, Geo. T. Ulmer, Isaac Tibbitt, Abraham Pankake, William Caldwell.

Among the names of the first jetté jetté, were Asa Brown, Henry Hostetter, and Humphreys, Rickell Tins, Jay Knight, and Gideon Schlotterbach. The first attorney who engaged in practice was Daniel E. Palmer, now of Angola, Steuben County, who located at Albion, in 1841.

We cannot forbear mentioning an incident which Mr. Nelson Prentiss gives in his admirable "Sketches of Noble County," as illustrative of pioneer life. We give it in his words:

"Soon after I settled in Noble County, some young men from the State of New York called on me, and wanted to take a look over the country. Accordingly, we left Rochester one morning, and made our way to 'Flat Belly Reserve' in Sparta. We were each supplied with a rifle, and called at Father Upson's where Henry, and I think Harrison, joined us in our tramp. We struck off southwest to the 'Nine Mile Lake,' shot many squirrels, and walked until we were all tired and hungry.

"Some time after noon, we reached the cabin of John Johns, whom many will well remember. I was somewhat acquainted with him, and told him we wanted something to eat. 'All right,' you can be accommodated.' The dinner was neatly ready. In a short time we were summoned to the table. (This is a misnomer; it was a punch-bowl.) On the punch-bowl table, in a large wooden bowl, was a generous supply of bean soup, seasoned by being boiled with the marrow bones of a huge carcass. There was a corn dodger, and plenty of wild honey. This was our bill of fare. Now let us take an inventory of the table furniture. One wooden bowl for soup and mutton; one earthen crock for barley; three plates, somewhat discolored; two tin cups, and two brown earthen bowls; one fork with two prongs, one with one tooth; one peggingawl; one case knife; one she knife; and a razor blade with a cork handle. These, with our pocket knives, furnished the tools. 'Take hold and help yourselves to such as you like,' was the order, and I never enjoyed a meal more in my life."

Mr. Prentiss appears, from his narrative, to have made his first appearance in Noble County in August, 1837, as a clerk in the store of Messrs. Powell & McConnell, at Rochester, then probably the largest business point in the county. From his sketches it also appears that he first settled in La Grange County. Many of his stories and incidents are exceedingly interesting, but we have not space to insert them, and must refer the reader to the columns of The New Era for further particulars.

In 1844, Noble County, which at first contained 12 congressional townships, was diminished by the loss of two tiers of sections, 12 in all, set off from the south side of Washington Township to Whitley County.

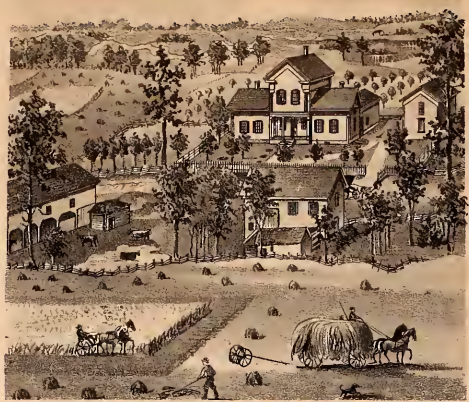

Noble County can boast of three live newspapers—The Standard, at Kendallville; The National Banner, at Lima; and The Argus, at Albion. All these papers are edited and conducted with ability, and their advertising columns bear evidence of their appreciation by the business portion of the community.

FARM & RESIDENCE of WM. HITHCOCK, SEC. 8, ORANGE TP. NOBLE CO., IND.

RES. OF GEO. HARVEY, ALBION, NOBLE CO., IND.

NOBLE COUNTY COURT HOUSE.

We should have been glad to furnish some account of the various newspapers which have from time to time honored the county, but have not been able to procure the materials.

Perhaps Mr. Prentiss, or some other competent writer, may furnish this chapter of history at a future day. We wish to acknowledge our obligations to Nelson Prentiss, Esq., Isaac Tibbott, Geo. W. Root, and many others, for valuable assistance and information (both verbal and written) furnished while collecting materials for our brief history of the county and its townships, cities and villages.

There may be discrepancies and misstatements, and perhaps blunders, but anyone familiar with the labor and trouble of picking up and compiling even a meagre of facts and incidents pertaining to the early history of any section of country after the lapse of forty years from its settlement, will appreciate our endeavors and readily excuse any shortcomings. We have obtained our information largely from early settlers like Mr. Prentiss, Mr. Tibbott, Mr. Pancke, Mr. Mitchell, Judge Burnham, and others, and have endeavored to write up as concise and systematic an account as the limited space in our Atlas would admit.

There is a good number of people who have been a long time in the county, whom we have not seen, and from whom doubtless we could have obtained additional and valuable information.

The failure to see and converse with all the "old settlers," has not been for any lack of inclination, or any disrespect on our part, but simply for the reason that we had not time to visit them all.

The map-work, both city and township, has been compiled after an immense amount of difficult labor, and we believe will be found extremely accurate. The engraving and printing were done by the best of the work will bear the closest scrutiny.

To the county surveyor, Mr. Sweet, and Mr. E. B. Gerber, of Ligonier, the engineers and surveyors are under obligations, and the same may be said of the county officers generally, to all of whom we tender our sincere thanks.

ALBION.

This township was constructed from the two townships, Jefferson and York, including sections 18 and 19 from Jefferson, and sections 13 and 24 from York. It is very nearly in the geographical center of the county, being thrown a little to one side by the offset in Washington Township.

There seems to be no separate history of Albion, it being included in the history of the two townships from which it was taken.

The village of Albion was made the county seat in August, 1846, but up to the commencement of work on the Baltimore and Ohio Railway, its growth was slow. Since this road was started, the place has taken a remarkable start. Steps have been taken to incorporate several villages, and large additions have been made and grounds and money donated for religious and school purposes, and a general disposition manifested to build up a good town.

The railway now building through the place will be one of the three or four great lines between Chicago and the seaboard, and, consequently, permanent facilities are assured; and if a few who call themselves Indians, would evince the same amount of public spirit and enterprise that those in moderate circumstances do, the future prosperity of Albion is beyond a peradventure.

The "County Seat Question" is probably settled, and a new and commodious court house will soon take the place of the present inconvenient and altogether unsafe building.

The present growth of Albion exceeds that of any town in the county. There are two churches, with several more in course of erection; a good school building, and the promise of a high school for several years adjacent to be erected soon. There are two hotels, the "Bradley" and the "Ward"; houses; a large number of stores of various descriptions; a steam flouring and custom mill; two steam saw mills; a steam planing mill; a tannery, and the usual variety of shops.

The town is quite pleasantly located, being like ancient Rome, on as many as "seven hills," and has as good a farming region adjacent as any town in the county.

Its chances for the railway shops are, perhaps, as good as those of any point between Chicago and Ohio, and initial steps are being taken to introduce additional manufacturers. The work of grading the railway through Noble County is a very expensive one, owing principally to the unevenness of the country and the numerous marshes and "sink-holes"—one of the latter at Albion being quite extensive, and requiring an immense amount of material to form the road bed. The filling of this "sink" has spread underneath the post box to a distance of 600 yards on either side, and thereby filled the marsh along the track to a height of twelve to fifteen feet.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP AND CITY OF KENDALLVILLE.

As near as we can ascertain, the Widow Dingman and her family were about the first settlers at Kendallville. Some accounts show that she was keeping a tavern as early as 1824. At all events she was there in 1836. Among the earliest settlers at and around Kendallville, were Hon. Wm. Mitchell, Geo. T. Ulmer, Henry Jiddings and sons, and others. John Sawyer and four sons settled on Section 29, Wayne Township, in March, 1836. Mr. Sawyer died in December following. John Brundage settled on Section 5, in 1836. James Wright and John Longenecker were early settlers. Geo. L. Kimball settled on government land, where he now lives, in 1838. J. W. Learned settled on section 4 in 1837; Alexander Sweet about same time. Wm. Ackerman settled in 1844, and Stutely Whitford and four sons, in section 20, about 1851. Samuel Appelman settled in Springfield, LaGrange County, in 1838. Removed to Noble County in 1874.

Wayne Township is greatly divided. It abounds in lakes, of which the principal are Tammany, a large sheet of water in the extreme northwest corner of the township, Round and Long Lakes, on sections 27 and 28; White Lake, on section 17, and Lake Butler at Kendallville.

There are no large streams, but small streams and springs are numerous. There is considerable marsh and several extensive timber swamps. The southeastern portion of the township is perhaps the finest for farming purposes, but there are good farms in all parts.

The old "Plank Road," and what was called the "Old Fort Wayne Road," passed through the western part of the township. The L. S. & M. S. Railway and the G. R. & I. Railway also cross the southern and southwestern portions.

CITY OF KENDALLVILLE.

This is the largest town in the county, and a place of good business. Its present population is nearly 3000. Up to the advent of the Michigan Southern and Lake Shore Railway, it was nothing more than a small hamlet; indeed Lisbon disputed for many years the supremacy in this portion of the county. The first settlers were Widow Dingman, about 1814, and Hon. Wm. Mitchell and Henry Jiddings, and sons, in 1836. The first village plat, containing twenty lots, was laid out by Mr. Mitchell, and he and his son John subsequently made extensive additions. The railways built Kendallville, which rapidly became the most important place in the eastern part of the county, and to-day it is as stirring and handsomely built as any town of its size in the state.

The first regular store opened in Kendallville was by Samuel Minard, about 1840. It stood where the marble shop of Geo. Aichele now stands. The second merchant was W. R. Evans. A post-office was first established in 1836, with Wm. Mitchell as post-master.

The first regular hotel was opened by Lake Higgins, about 1848. It stood on lots 17 and 18, original town, north of where the Central Hotel now stands. As early as 1834 or '35, the Widow Dingman had kept a country tavern for the accommodation of travelers.

The first daguerrian artist was Harvey Smith, who is still a citizen. The first physician was B. G. Cissel, who was also a preacher for the Methodist denomination. Dr. O. J. Vincent was also an early settler.

The hotel kept by L. Higgins was called the "Calico House," on account of the fancy style in which it was painted. It was built by Henry Harris, who was also the first blacksmith in town. The "Calico House" and the one farther south, built by J. W. Kline, and known by the names, "Kline House," "Deven House" and "Kelly House," were long kept by M. M. Bowen at different periods.

The first school house was built about 1839 or 1840. It stood on the town line between Wayne and Allen, a few rods west of the Fort Wayne road.

The city contains eight churches, some of them very fine structures (see views) and all respectable and neat; three are of brick and five of wood. The high school building is the finest and most costly in this part of the state. It is constructed of red brick, and is about 60 by 50 feet in size, and three stories in height. It is situated in a commanding location, and if the good people of the city would take as much pains to adorn the commodious grounds surrounding it as they have in fitting up the structure itself, it would hardly be surpassed by any similar institution in the state.

Kendallville has many elegant and beautiful private residences. Among them we may mention those of John Mitchell, Mr. Colgrove and Mr. Meyer; and there are many more which attest the taste and culture of their occupants. There are several fine business blocks, and the leading merchants do a very heavy business in dry goods, groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, hardware and drugs; some of them claiming annual sales of from $40,000 to $100,000 each.

There are two hotels, the "Kelly House" and the "Central Hotel," a large laundry, a factory for the manufacture of wagon and buggy caskets, two steam flouring and custom mills, an extensive grain elevator and warehouse, several saw, door and blind factories and planing mills, and a large number of carriage and wagon factories, blacksmith shops, and the usual variety of mechanics and artisans.

The city is finely located at the crossing of the L. S. & M. S. and the G. R. & I. Railways, which furnish ample facilities for transportation. It has a large number of professional and business men, and carries an air of thrift and enterprise almost second to no place of its size.

Artificious investments in safe manufactures would accelerate its growth, and largely to its trade and commerce, and make the city one of the important towns of Indiana.

Kendallville and the surrounding country sustains one of the liveliest, most spicy and enterprising provincial newspapers to be found in the north-west—the "Star." It is conducted with marked ability, is generally well supplied with local and original matter, and has a very satisfactory circulation.

Of secret orders and kindred institutions, Kendallville has its full share. In short, the interests to be fully up to the times in every respect, and second to none.

CITY OF LIGONIER.

The first settler on the ground where Ligonier now stands, according to Mr. Pancke's recollection, was a man by the name of Ward Bradford, who built a house on lot No. 1 of the original plat of the town, recorded at Lima, while Noble County formed a part of LaGrange County. This was about 1836. Ward also built the first bridge, where the covered bridge now is.

There were settlers all around the village plat before Ward's time. Jacob Wolf settled just west of where Ligonier was subsequently laid out, in 1837. Among the early settlers were Gideon Schlatterback, Henry Engle, John Hostetter, Adam Engle, and many others in the vicinity.

Abraham Pancke settled in Sept., 1834. Mr. Pancke filled many of the prominent positions in the early days of the county.

The original plat was laid out by Isaac Cowin, about the year 1835. The principal business street was named Calvin Street, in honor of the first settler.

In early days (as elsewhere stated) the Town of Rochester, about one mile above Ligonier, on the river, was the most important in the county. The death of Gen. Alexander McConnell, in 1854, left settlers in such shape that the railway company located their station at Ligonier instead of Rochester, and the old town has consequently gone down, and the new one risen to importance and prosperity.

The first merchant who located at Ligonier was Daniel Stuckey; the second one, Henry Tripp.

James Latta, who was one of the first preachers in the county, came in 1834. He belonged to the Methodist persuasion. The first court in the county was held at the house of Adam Engle, about April, 1837.

The city is finely situated on the Elk River, and close upon the borders of the celebrated "Haw Patch," known as one of the best sections of Indiana, and from which the town derives a very large trade.

The growth of Ligonier dates from the completion of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, which company have erected at this point probably the best and most capacious grain warehouse on the line between Chicago and Toledo. A very fine passenger station has also been lately erected. Ligonier handles a very large amount of grain and fruit, lumber, live stock, poultry, butter, eggs, etc.

There are four houses for religious worship; two convalescent school buildings; a large steam boring and custom mill; an iron foundry; several steam saw mills, sash and blind factories, carriage shops, pump factories, and various other minor establishments. An extensive furniture factory has lately been put in operation by Chicago and Ligonier capitalists, and Messrs. E. B. Gerber & Co. have commenced the manufacture of handles of every description, on an extensive scale.

The town is well supplied with professional and business men, and they evidently mean business. Very large amounts of dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, harness, hardware, groceries, marble work, etc., are handled annually, and the stranger always notices the peculiarly stirring appearance of the place, especially on Saturdays.

A strong effort is being made to get the Canada Southern Railway located via Ligonier, which, if successful, will make it one of the best business points in the northern part of the state.

Among many other reasons for the continued growth and prosperity of Ligonier, is the fact that the National Banner, an enterprising go-ahead newspaper, is located here. It works for the best interests of its city and the surrounding country, and is always on the alert for anything which can contribute to their advancement.

Ligonier is noted for the large number of Hebrews among its business men, several of whom are among the wealthiest in the county. In short, it is a living town, and consequently prosperous.

FERRY.

The first actual settler in Perry Township, by all accounts, was Levi Perry, who settled in the early part of 1830, on section 33. The first land entered in the township was by Mr. Perry and Isaac Dingman, June 1st, 1831, on section 33.

Jacob Wolf settled, where he now owns a farm, August 18, 1831. He and Abraham Pancke and Henry Engle each entered 160 acres of land, on which they or their families (Mr. Pancke and Mr. Engle have died within the past year) now reside. Their titles bear the signature of Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Wolf was the first justice of the peace within the limits of the present County of Noble.

Among the earliest settlers were Henry and Adam Engle, Gideon Schlatterback, Henry Miller, John Davis, John James, Henry Hostetter, and Abraham Pancke.

Mr. Pancke served on the first board of county commissioners elected after the organization of the county, in 1836. He also served as one of the first grand jurors, and was one of the judges at the first election held in the county, at Richard Jones' tavern, three miles south of Ligonier. Mr. Pancke died, suddenly, in April, 1874. Henry Engle died a few months previously.

For many years this township was the leading one in the county, and its history is intimately connected with that of the whole county. It contains some of the best farming lands in the county. The "Haw Patch" is known over the whole state as a most beautiful region, highly cultivated and finely irrigated.

Within the limits of this township, about one mile southeast of Ligonier, on the Elk River, once stood the busiest town in the county—Rochester. It was originally laid out by Simpson Cummings, in 1836. The property was purchased by what was called "The Green Mount and Company," of New Brunswick, in 1837. James McConnell was agent for the company. The first settler at Rochester, and one of the first in the county, was Hugh Allison, who subsequently sold to Cummings. Allison probably erected a saw-mill. The first store in the county was said to have been located here also.

In 1844 Babkirk & French commenced the erection of a forge, for the manufacture of iron from ore found on sections 16 and 17, in Perry Township. Babkirk and French soon after died, and the business failed for the want of capital. Henry French, the surviving partner, sold the lease of the water-power to Warren F. Lee & Co., of Fawn River, Michigan, who started the works and operated them several years, making a superior quality of iron. But he was failed, and the business was at once abandoned. In those days this was the most flourishing village in the county, doing more business than all other places. When the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway was put in operation, the business of Rochester was gradually transferred to the rising town of Ligonier, and only a tith of the business of former times remained. The canal projected to run from Michigan City to Fort Wayne, was intended to pass through Rochester.

Gen. Alexander McConnell was for many years proprietor of the water-power, and with his son erected a saw-mill, and about the same time James McConnell erected a saw-mill. The general died in 1854, and this event led matters in such shape that the railway company could not get satisfactory title, and the depot (which had been located) was removed to Ligonier. This was the death-blow to Rochester, and from that day its glory departed. The water-power and mills are at present owned by McConnell & Lape

ORANGE.

We have not been able to ascertain who was the first actual settler of this township, but among the very earliest were David S. Field, from Springfield, Windsor County, Vermont, and Luke Diggins, who both settled as early as 1835, David and Charles Law, Timothy Gaby, T. M. Watkins, Joseph Daulton, William Inces, and others.

This township, like others in Noble County, shows much variety of surface. The largest body of water in the county, the "Reservoir" is in this town, and the Chain Lakes and Tamarack Lake are wholly or partly within its limits.

The northeastern and northwestern portions contain some of the best farms. Among them we may mention those of H. F. Dyer, John Holsinger, and H. H. Wanner. Mr. T. Gaby and others have also very fine farms in the southern part of the township.

Maggie Field, second daughter of David S. Field, was the first white child born in the township. Mr. Prentiss says his daughter Helen was the first, but she was born in Hingham, Massachusetts, before her father emigrated to Indiana. David S. Field died in November, 1874, at the age of 73 years, at Wolcottville, where his family still reside.

There are three villages in Orange township: Rome City, on the "Reservoir," Brimfield, on the L. S. & M. S. Railway, and a part of the village of Wolcottville, on the G. R. & I. Railway. The latter lies principally in Johnson Township, LaPorte County.

Brimfield is a small town containing 300 or 400 people, and having considerable trade and business. It is the outlet for passengers and traffic for Albion, and is quite a thriving place.

Rome City is beautifully located at the point of the "Reservoir," on the G. R. & I. Railway. It contains some 400 people, and has a fine hotel, the "Lakeside," a number of stores, a good school building, two churches, a woolen factory, flour mill, saw mill, and a clothes-rack manufactory. Its location is the finest in the county. The "Reservoir" was constructed by the state about 1875-8, for a fee of $100,000, and is a projected canal from Michigan City to Fort Wayne. Its waters cover an area of about eight hundred acres, around which is some of the finest scenery in Indiana. The water-power is quite extensive, having a fall of 27 feet. A large woolen factory, owned by J. C. Geisendorff, was destroyed by fire the forepart of May, 1874, involving a loss of $60,000. It is reported that it will be rebuilt, either as a woolen or paper mill. It was formerly built by Aaron and William Bliss, and John Weston, about 1855. The grist mill was built by William Mitchell and John Weston, in 1852. The Magnet Mills were built about 1870.

In the vicinity of Rome City are a great number of mineral springs, said to have curative properties fully equal to those of the famous Waukeusa Springs in Wisconsin.

The "Reservoir" abounds in fine fish and wild fowl in their season, and no better pleasure grounds are to be found anywhere than it affords. A judicious outlay of money in improvements and advertising would speedily convert this locality into one of the most attractive watering places in any in the country. A beautiful view of the city, the lake and its surroundings, with steeper, pleasure boats, etc., will be found in the atlas.

The facilities for procuring, storing, and shipping ice from Rome, are very superior, and material for the business is inexhaustible. Large quantities are annually shipped to Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, and other points, and the traffic is only in its infancy. With liberal management, the prospects of Rome City are extremely favorable.

YORK.

The first settler in this township was John Knight, who, according to Mr. Prentiss, came into the town in 1829, making him the next settler in the county after Joel Bristol and the Tibbo family. This conflicts with Isaac Tibbo's recollection, who thinks Levi Perry was the second settler.

Knight located on section 29. The next settler appears to have been Washington Henshaw, and following soon were the Grays, Joseph Bell, and John Bowman.

G. M. Applegate entered the first land in the township, the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 17, 40 acres, October 27, 1831.

Among the earliest settlers were James L. Henshaw, J. D. Pradford, David Anderson, John Williams, James Gray, Joseph Beall, H. Lewis and others.

John Eliska Blackman was subsequently a citizen of this township.

The county seat was at various times located in three different places in this township. On section 15, on land now owned by John Holy, at Augusta and at Fort Mitchell.

This township has an immense amount of marsh land, more than any other township in the county, with the exception of Noble. The Springfield County Aylen, a fine view of which is given, is located in this township.

This township had the honor (7) of having the only criminal ever executed in Noble County, hung at Augusta, in November, 1840. His name was John Lechner.

Joseph Bradford was the first justice of the peace for York township. He belonged in Sparta Township, but performed the duties of his office in both.

John Bowman was the first resident justice, elected in 1839.

The first school building stood on section 39. When first organized, York Township contained fifteen married couples and one bachelor. The first school teacher was James Mcullen. Joseph Bradford taught a school on section 32 in the winter of 1836-7.

The original town of Fort Mitchell was laid out May 17, 1838, by Samuel Henshaw and W. F. Eagle. It was located on the south fork of the Elkhart River, in section 35.

For some years it improved quite rapidly and was a prominent town, having been at one period the county seat.

Considerable portions of the town have been vacated since the decline in its business, and now constitute parts of adjacent farms.

A grist mill and woolen mill are in operation and doing quite an amount of business.

The Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railroad passes through this township.

SPARTA.

This township is a very good farming region, though there is considerable marsh land. The old Fort Wayne and Goshen Road passed through it, and the new Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway will soon be completed, giving the town a good market facilities.

The old wagon road was said to have been originally cut through under the direction of Gen. Anthony Wayne, which, if true, gives it a very early date, as Gen. Wayne died at Presque Isle, now Erie, Penn., in 1795.

John L. Powers seems to have been the first settler. He came into the township in the fall of 1837.

Sparta claims the honor of having the first brick building in the country, the house built by the United States for the chief "Flat Belly," whose reservation took in a large share of the township. This building was erected as early as 1820, and perhaps sooner. Further mention is made of it in the sketch of the county.

Among the early settlers were Richard Bray, Richard Jeffries; James Machl, M. McIntee, John Johns, Jacob Baker, Charles Murray, Hartwell Coleman, Daniel Ollivine, Andrew C. Douglas and Henry Weade.

The first school was taught by Adah Kent in 1837.

The first store was opened in a log cabin, by M. M. Merriman.

The first sermon was delivered by Rev. James Latta, in a nine-cornered cabin, built by J. L. Powers.

Within the limits of Sparta was also located the first seat of justice for Noble County.

The building occupied by the county offices and also by Isaac Spencer and his family, stood a short distance north of the present residence of Thomas Kershner on section —. No courts were held there, and the township, according to Mr. Prentiss' sketches, lived the two neighbors who traded virtues, to the entire satisfaction of all the parties, one giving the other a pair of steers as boot money for the difference in the value of the women.

The village of Crownell, on the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway, is improving quite rapidly, and will no doubt become a point of considerable business. The people show a disposition to make the most of their advantages. The place has two churches, several stores, a hotel and quite a variety of shops.

ELKHART.

This township was settled early. Among the early ones were Samuel and Isaac Tibbo, who came into the township in the fall of 1834. George Swank, the Gibsons and Caldwell, and Ralph Hardenbrook, were early settlers. Daniel Tibbo was married before he settled. Sarah Jane, the oldest daughter of Samuel Tibbo, was the first white child born in the township. Isaac Tibbo was married to a daughter of Adam Hall of Allen County, soon after settling in Elkhart.

The settlers of this township were obliged to go to Fort Wayne, a distance of 40 miles, to get milling done.

The first school building was built about 1832-3, on section 27.

The first preacher was Rev. Richard Robinson, Methodist, who came from Ohio.

The first sermon was given in a small log cabin, belonging to John Knight.

Joseph Morrow was the first person buried in the township.

Thomas Pierson taught a select school, at the house of John Knight, at that time.

The village of Springfield, on the Elkhart River, in section 22, was settled quite early, and did considerable business for several years. A grist and saw mill were erected, and continued in operation until destroyed by fire, after which, the land owners in the vicinity purchased the overflowed lands, tore out the dam, and virtually destroyed the town. A slight obstruction of this branch of the Elkhart River, caused a great amount of overflow and consequent sickness, besides occupying a large amount of other good land, and the settlers determined that no dam should be permitted at Springfield.

The original plat was laid out January 31, 1841, by William Pearson.

The village of Wawaka is located on section 28, in this township. It was laid out February 4, 1857. It owes its location and growth to the L. S. & M. S. Railway, and is quite a business point.

It contains two churches, Methodist and Free Will Baptist; a steam flouring and custom mill; a steam saw mill (view of which are given in this Atlas); three or four stores; several wagon and blacksmith shops; two shoe shops, etc., and a population of about 400.

The Railway Company have erected a very neat station house, and put up a large grain warehouse for the accommodation of the farming community.

The land on which Wawaka stands was originally owned by Isaac Tibbo. The town boasts a good school building, and has all the appliances of business and civilization of similar towns elsewhere.

ALLEN.

This is one of the best farming townships in Noble County, having a smaller area of wet land than any of the others. The only lake which touches it is Butler Lake, near Kendallville, part of said city being in this township. The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway traverses the township from north to south, and the new line of the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway crosses the south part, connecting with the Grand Rapids road at Avilla. The township contains the villages of Avilla, St. Mary's, and Lisbon, with two Idling's. Addition to the city of Kendallville.

The first settlers in Allen Township were George Ulmer, and Justice

C. Alvord, who located in 1834 in what is now Idling's Addition to Kendallville. Henry Idlings and four sons settled on section 4 in 1836. A. D. Whitford entered land in section 2, February 14, 1837, and located the next year. Samuel Weiner settled in the spring of 1836. Edwin Randall, at first time looking for land, helped Mr. Weiner raise a log cabin. Mr. Randall soon after entered six eighty-acre tracts in sections 28 and 29, being the third man who entered land in the township. He did not settle, however, until 1847, and even then there were no roads and nothing to make a path except "blazed" trees and an old Indian trail from Fort Wayne to Lima, in LaPorte County. Mr. Randall held the office of associate judge from 1842 to 1855, at which time the office was abolished.

Truman Wheeler came to the county in 1841 and entered land in section 31, which he deeded to his son, Heman H. Wheeler, who settled on the place in 1844. Forty acres of the place had been chopped, not cleared, and a log house built, with a board floor, which was a novelty in those days, and Mr. Wheeler's was the only one of the kind in the neighborhood. There was then but one cabin between them and Lisbon, a distance of five miles. Fort Wayne was the nearest market, and the trip there and back occupied three days.

John Fillmore, a cousin of Millard Fillmore, was quite an early settler, as were also R. P. Johnson, Elihu Washworth, and Abner Rice.

Lisbon is one of the oldest towns in the county, but is too close to Kendallville to ever amount to much.

Avilla is a little place, one mile from the south line of the township, and contains a number of good business blocks, and some very good dwellings. Baum, Walters & Co., and Messrs. Wheeler & Spencer, have lately made extensive additions to the place, and the prospects which will be given by the advent of the B. & C. R. Railway, must make the place one of the first in the county, at no distant date.

Dr. T. P. Dickwell settled at Lisbon, in 1847. He was one of the first regularly elected surgeons in the county, and was a member of the constitutional convention for the revision of the state constitution in 1850-51. He was 26 years of age, and the youngest member of the body.

NOBLE.

This township has the honor of having the earliest settlement in the county, Joel Bristol locating 3 1/2 miles southeast of Wolf Lake April 4, 1827. Andrew Humphreys settled northwest of Wolf Lake, on section 8, in 1831—three years before the county was organized. McIntyre Seymour came to the county about 1836, but did not settle until 1840, when he located on section 21. Louis Hite came to Wolf Lake in 1839. Elias and Samuel Jones are very early settlers. Steadman Gray, now living at Wolf Lake, settled at Fort Mitchell in 1835, and claims to have manufactured the first flour and meal made in the county. The arrivals of later date are: John Young, 1849; Thomas Gray and Francis R. Davis, 1844; George Klitt and three sons, 1846; Wm. S. Quinn, same year, and Frederick Sultz, 1848. Abraham Ott also settled in 1840.

Noble Township has more waste land than any other in the county, nearly one-half of it being covered by lakes and marshes. They are the headwaters of the Tippecanoe River, the lake of the same name being its principal feeder. The other lakes in the township of any note are: Bear, High, Lion, Muncie, Silver, Deep, Wolf, Crane, Crooked, River and Long. The villages are Wolf Lake, and Kendallville, situated on the old Fort Wayne and Goshen road, and among the oldest villages in the county. The best portions of the township are the northwestern and southeastern, where may be found some very fine farms. The first death was that of John Voorhes.

Dr. Elias Jones, living west of Wolf Lake, was one of the early settlers; and among the very first physicians in the county.

The doctor owns one of the finest farms in the township, as the view given in this Atlas will testify.

Doctor Jones has on his farm the oldest log house west of Wolf Lake, built in 1825. It is shown in the view of his premises.

JEFFERSON.

This is perhaps the best farming township in the county, its soil being generally a sandy loam, and not as much waste as there is in any other, with the exception of, perhaps, Allen and Perry. It is generally well improved, and the inhabitants are intelligent and well-to-do farmers.

According to the best information, the first settlers in the township were: David Harriam, Benjamin Potts and James Skinner, who came in 1836. John Foster arrived in 1837, and was the sixth family in the township. James Thompson entered land in Orange Township sometime in 1836, and settled in Jefferson in the Spring of 1837. John Call and Abraham Carey must have settled about the same time. F. A. Black came in 1845, and located on section 24. Calvin Probst, 1848, and Daniel W. Hines, 1854, were among the later arrivals. S. C. Spencer and six sons located in 1837. E. B. Spencer moved to Allen Township in 1853.

The first election in the township was held about 1836, at which time seven votes were cast, the following being the list: James Skinner, John Foster, Samuel Spencer, John Call, James Thompson, John Bailey and Abraham Carey.

Some sections are appropriated from the west side of this township, and constitute a part of Albion Township. The new B. & C. R. crosses Jefferson and Albion townships.

SWAN.

This is the southeast corner township of the county and has quite an extensive area of marsh land in the western and southern portions. The Grand Rapids and Indiana, and Detroit, Erie River and Illinois Railroads now run through it, intersecting at Grand Rapids and at Cooch's road, the southeast corner of the township, and formerly called Simonsville. The other villages are Swan and a flag station called Bruce.

The first settler in the township was George Rickard, who located in February, 1834, on land now owned by Hamilton Badger. Conrad Cramer was the second settler, locating in June of same year on section 11, where he has since resided. Charles and James Shelner and David Tonsley settled in the fall, and Aaron Wood in August of same year. According to information given by Mr. Cramer, there were but four dwellings at the time he settled between Fort Wayne and the LaGrange County prairie, one of them being a hotel kept on the present site of Kendalville by a Mrs. Dingman, and called the "Brick Tavern." John and Jonas Strouse came in 1836, also Adam Fulk and four sons, who settled on land in sections 31 and 32. Samuel Broughton settled about 1838, Jacob Rhodes about 1840. John and William Whan are also early settlers. Hiram King located in June, 1837.

GREEN.

In this township we find a variety of country lakes, some marsh, quite substantial hills, etc. It is very broken, and, with the exception of a strip along the north side, is perhaps inferior as a farming township to those surrounding it, with the exception of Noble.

The first settler, so far as our information extends, was Samuel Gray, who located south of what is now Green Center Post-office. Jacob Eiman settled in Fall of 1836 on section 5. W. E. Bowen first settled near Allion about 1837; shortly after removed to Fort Mitchell, and finally to present location, section 4, Green Township, in February, 1840. David Buner located in 1838, on section 21. G. A. Herandeen and L. N. Clemens came about 1845, and J. Watt about 1848.

The lakes in this township are quite numerous, a chain of them feeding the Elkhart River in the northern part of the township. They have but very little marsh around them, and are nearly all surrounded by quite high bluffs. Bowen and Long Lakes are very fine sheets of water, and all of them abound in fish. There is comparatively little marsh in this township, but the soil is generally clay, and the bluffs composed of such material will wash, thereby rendering the country inferior to a more level one for farming purposes.

WASHINGTON.

Land was entered in this township as early as 1835, but whether there were any actual settlements previous to the organization of the county in 1836 we cannot say. This was formerly a full congressional township of thirty-six sections, but the south two tiers were set off to Whitley County in 1844, leaving Washington twenty-four sections. The township lies among the lakes and streams forming the head-waters of the Tippecanoe River and, like many surrounding townships, contains a large amount of water and marsh.

Among the earliest settlers were Joseph Galloway, Joseph E. Adair and Joseph McIntyre. A portion of the original "Flat Belly" Reservation extended into this township.

The early history of Washington would no doubt be equally interesting with that of other portions of the county, but we have been unable to procure anything of importance.
